Quote

“God is God. Because He is God, He is worthy of my trust.”

- Elizabeth Elliot

In the book of Exodus 16:4–5, the people of Israel are in the wilderness—free from Egypt, yet not fully settled in the Promised Land. Freedom had come, but comfort had not.

When the Lord led the people of Israel through Moses in the wilderness, there was a shortage of food. The people grumbled, forgetting the God who had just parted the sea. The Lord heard their complaints and fed them in the wilderness. For forty years, He sustained them in the wilderness so that they lacked nothing; their clothes did not wear out, and their feet did not swell.

Redemption is costly. God gives us that costly redemption when we confess our sins. Today, salvation can be experienced in our spiritual lives as we pass through a wilderness. When we seek the Lord without grumbling, salvation will be found even in our dry spiritual lives.

The Lord has graciously given us the days of Lent. During Lent, we have the opportunity to draw closer to the Lord. During Lent, we meditate more on the cross because it is considered a wonderful medicine for our spiritual lives. When we look at the cross during Lent, we can see a new change in our lives. Therefore, during these days of Lent, let us dedicate ourselves to the crucified Jesus, our Savior, in prayer, reading the Scriptures, and helping others. May the Lord grant us the grace to receive the blessings of these Lenten days. Amen.

Prayer:

Lord of love, we pray through Jesus Christ that we may seek You in our dry lives and that You will bless us and guide us, heavenly Father of love. Amen.
