Sarah was old, and Abraham was advanced in age. Naturally, all hope seemed gone. From a human point of view, there was no way left. But in God's sight, that very moment became the time to create a way. The birth of Isaac was not merely the birth of a child; it was a powerful sign of God's faithfulness, the fulfillment of His promise, and an important step in His plan of salvation.

The life of Isaac leads us to a greater truth. On Mount Moriah, when Abraham prepared to offer Isaac (Genesis 22), the event pointed forward to the cross of Jesus Christ. Just as Isaac was taken to be offered when no solution seemed possible, God provided another way for his rescue by arranging a ram as the sacrifice in Isaac's place.

The Bible is the continuous story of God's plan of salvation, beginning with creation and reaching its fulfillment in the cross and resurrection. God created human beings in His own image to live in relationship with Him. But sin broke that relationship and brought pain and death into the world. Yet God promised salvation. Throughout history—from Abraham to the prophets—He prepared His plan, all pointing toward the cross. Jesus Christ gave His life on the cross, opening the way of grace for all, and through His resurrection He defeated death and granted new life and eternal hope.

Humanity tried many ways to be free from sin, offering roosters, goats, birds, and other animals as sacrifices. Yet people continued to wander like sheep without a shepherd. When all human efforts failed and no way remained, the Father showed His love for the world by sending His only Son, Jesus Christ, to take away human sin. He sacrificed Himself for the sins of all people. Therefore, it is true: where there is no way, where none exists.

Today, we may feel there is no way forward—whether because of sin, financial struggles, sickness, obstacles in ministry, or broken relationships. But the Bible reveals a God who makes a path through the sea, brings springs of water in the desert, and opens new doors before closed ones. “The God who makes a way where none exists” is not merely an idea but a truth that can be experienced. True identity, forgiveness, and hope are found only in Christ.

During these Lenten days, let us examine ourselves and repent. Whether spiritual, physical, or mental, God is the One who makes a way where there is no way. Just as He provided another way for Isaac, He will also make a way for us today. When all our ways seem finished, the Lord is able to create a new one.

Prayer: Lord, if our sins are blocking our redemption, our relationship with You, or the work that has stopped in our lives, we come before You in self-examination and prayer. Forgive us and make a new way for us, Father, in the name of Lord Jesus. Amen.
